Re: Access to Universal Wireless Internet - Docket No. 07-16

Mr. Chairman:

In my experience as a certified librarian, whether as former chief librarian for the Town of Middleton, MA or Hamilton - Wenham, MA, or the Essex County Sheriff's Department or the New England Governor's Council, I remember when there were books and periodicals only. Now, of course, countless written materials and resources for learning and research exist on the Internet. I see access to the Internet as the means for students now and more so in the future to hone their reading and writing skills. I also see, unfortunately, many students, as well as schools, cannot afford access to the Net.

There is a proposal, however, to establish a national network of free wireless broadband access. I am taking note of the proposal recently submitted by M2Z Networks. It would make our country fully connected to the Internet, and advance education and reading beyond belief.

Your commission should carefully consider this proposal. All Americans, but most especially our students, should have access to fast and free wireless Internet access so that they can benefit from such groundbreaking technology. M2Z can make this happen. Thank you.

Sincerely yours,

Shirley M. Raynard
